- D2: US-A-3 503 497 (ADILETTA JOSEPH G ET AL)

2. The closest prior art is represented by D1 (EP 0266688), which discloses packaging designed to be used for transporting sterile objects or objects which are to be sterilized, the packaging comprising a box (1) for receiving the sterile objects or objects to be sterilized and a cover sheet (4) secured to the box so as to seal it. The cover sheet is made from a material which is impervious to a decontamination gas and has at least one window (2) which is closed by a part (3) made of selectively impervious material.

The difference between the application and D1 is a flexible part which is made of a material that is impervious to a decontamination gas and is secured to the cover sheet. Therefore the subject matter of claim 1 is novel (PCT Article 33(2)).

3. The problem addressed by the present invention can thus be considered that of producing packaging which can be decontaminated without the objects inside the packaging coming into contact with the decontaminating gas. The prior art does not mention this problem or its solution, and even if it is considered that the use of flexible parts as valves is already known (from D7, for example), it is not obvious to apply this principle to the context of sterilization followed by a decontamination phase, as proposed in the application.

Therefore the subject matter of claim 1 involves an inventive step (PCT Article 33(3)).

4. Similarly, the production method according to claim 14, the use according to claims 17 and 18, and the sterilizing method according to claim 19 are novel and involve an inventive step.
5. Claims 2 to 13 are dependent on claim 1 and claims 15 and 16 are dependent on claim 14; thus they likewise meet the PCT novelty and inventive step requirements.
